London, April 9. Extract of a Letter from Paris, dated April 9.

SIR,

WE have at present here, not only an illustrious, but most prodigious Pattern of Goodness to the Afflicted and Unfortunate; He seems to be Charity itself come to bless this Metropolis and Kingdom in a human Shape. The Person I mean is the Duke of Orleans, who, if his Means were equal to the Benevolence of his Mind, would enrich all the Poor of the Universe; for his Bounties and Charities are not confin'd in his own Country; Abundance of British Subjects here have largely partaken of them; and a great Number of the Children of Irish Officers in the Service of France owe their present Support to the generous Care he has order'd to be had of them.

The Generality of the Peers and Nobility too are conspicuous for the Number of Families to which they give Pensions to subsist them; it is impossible for them to keep their Charities long a Secret, for the Gratitude of the Receivers still proclaim them some time or other; and it was judiciously remark'd by a Subject of Great Britain, that the French Quality give twice as much every Year to the Poor as they throw away on Opera's, Masquerades and Assemblies; but whether the British Quality imitate them in so laudable an Attonement for their Vices, is what we are no Judges of on this Side the Water. Your Act for Insolvent Debtors is indeed very much talk'd of among our Countrymen here, and the French themselves highly commend it; but they think your Laws very odly fram'd, or the Generality of the English very much depraved and immoral in their Principles, to make Prisons so absolutely necessary among you for the getting in of Debts. It is true, we have Prisons and Prisoners too for Debts, but I have been told that you have more People confin'd, that is, lock'd up in the Fleet or King's Bench, than can be found in all the Prisons of Paris put together, and it is morally impossible even for our Prisoners to be distressed for any thing necessary to a sufficient Subsistence, their Liberty excepted: Nor is it in my Power to describe to you, or even give you an Idea of the Collections made for Prisoners in this Holy Time of Lent, besides the private Charities sent to them: In these Works of Piety and Grace the Agents are not Parish-Officers, Overseers of the Poor, and such Sort of Gentry; no Sir, you shall see Presidents of the Parliament, Marshals of France, Princesses and Dutchesses, the Nobility of all Degrees, and both Sexes, making such Collections, visiting the Prisoners one by one: They don't trust to a Goaler or Turnkey, but distribute their Charities with their own Hands, and in such Places as would give one of your Petit-Maitres the Vapours to come within Sight of it. As for the fine Ladies of London and Westminster, I don't write this as a Lesson for them: The dear Creatures have no time to spend in such Acts of Piety, or Money to spare from the Opera or Quadrille. If they are but handsome, well-shap'd, and have Prudence enough to preserve their Reputation, according to what the Mode calls Reputation, they immediately think they fulfil the Duties of a Christian, and indulge their Pleasures without the least Reflection on the Miseries of their Fellow Creatures. But had not a Lady, a fine English Lady, better lend a Part of her Pin-Money to God Almighty, by distributing it among the Prisons of London and Westminster, than sacrifice it all to her Vanity or Pleasures? The most uncharitable hard-hearted Fellow that France ever had for a Minister, was Chauvelin, and you see what became of him; I should say, what is become of him hitherto; for every Degree of Douceur he meets with will be construed by some watchful People to the Disadvantage of the Cardinal.

Edinburgh, April 5. Whereas there is a Paragraph inserted in a late Whitehall Evening Post, extremely injurious to this City, the Words being,

'By Letters Yesterday from Edinburgh, we have an 'Account that on the Acquital of Mac Lauchlain, who was 'tried as being aiding and assisting in the Murder of Capt. 'Porteous, there was prodigious Huzzaing and Rejoicing 'in that City; and that there was forc'd to be a Guard, lest 'any ill Consequences should ensue.'

The Magistrates, to demonstrate that the said Paragraph is entirely false and without Ground, do appeal to the Judges, Lawyers, and other Persons of Distinction on his Jury, That upon the Morning of M'Lauchlan's being acquitted for Want of Proof, there was no Stir, Shouts, Huzzaing, or any Demonstration of Joy by the Inhabitants of this City, either among the Superior or Inferior Sort, except a few of his Brother Footmen, and no Confluence of People more than ordinary about the Court Doors; so that it is left to the Readers with what View such a Story was invented and inserted into publick News-Papers; the Design is obvious, to create more Enemies to inflame Mens Minds against a Community and City, who has given many Proofs of her Loyalty to the present Government and Protestant Succession.

April 12. upon the Arrival of the News last Thursday, of our Lord Provost being taken into Custody of a Gentleman of the Black Rod, the whole City was in the utmost Concern, and the principal Citizens have since had several Meetings with the Magistrates, both with Respect to that, and the Resolution of the House of Peers, concerning the Citizens and Inhabitants, their Behaviour that Night the Mob murderded Capt. Porteous; but we have not yet learned what has been the final Result of their Meetings.

London, April. 13. On the 26th ult. John Wright, one of the Montrosses to the Train of Artillery at Londonderry, was commited to the Earth, in he 110th Year of his Age. He was a Pikeman in the Year 1641. Four Years ago he made a Spinning Wheel for a Gentlewoman of that Town, and in the Hundredth Year of his Age he made a Coffin, which serv'd him 10 Years for a Cupboard, and at last incloſed his Bones.

London,

London, April 16. We have the following Letter from our Correſpondent at Paris.

'The Marquis de Monti, who acquired ſo much Reputation when Ambaſſador in Poland, by his real Activity and ſeeming Zeal for the Service of King Staniſlaus; the Marqueſs de Monti, who lately receiv'd ſuch Honour at Bologna in Italy, the Place of his Nativity; that very Marqueſs de Monti, who not long ago was honour'd with the Order of the Holy Ghoſt, and nam'd for his Majeſty's Ambaſſador to the Court of Vienna, is now diſgrac'd and ſhares the Fate of Chauvelin, becauſe he has been fully convicted of having ſhared with him in thoſe Sums that were ſent to engage the Poland and Pruſſian Grandees in the Intereſt of King Staniſlaus. This Meteor from a Foreign Clime could not be ſatisfied with the prodigious Riſe of his Fortune, but by Malverſations and Breach of Faith, as ſoon as Truſt afforded him an Opportunity to ſhew the Corruption and Avarice of his Nature, he aim'd to grow rich on a ſudden, and has now verified the Saying of Solomon, As a Stranger he meets with little Pity; and if a Knave and a Fool, he deſerves none.'

Letters from Lisbon ſay, That a Prieſt, Native of Monſaraz, died lately at Olivenga, aged 120 Years.

And from Paris, That one Le Doux died ſome Days ago in Normandy, in the 111th Year of his Age, and has left a Widow aged 105.

April 21. Some Letters from Conſtantinople ſay, that the Populace incenſed at the Conditions of Peace propoſed to the Porte, went to the Seraglio, and as the Grand Signior was returning from Hunting, cried out, War, War againſt the Muſcovites; let us revenge the Glory of the Muſſulmans.

April 26. Yeſterday at Noon the Earl of Darnly, Grand Maſter elect of the Ancient and Honourable Society of Free-Maſons, in a Chariot drawn by ſix fine Horſes, attended with upward of an hundred Coaches and Chariots, went from his Lordſhip's Houſe in Pall-Mall, where the Company breakfaſted, which coſt his Lordſhip two hundred Pounds, and then proceeded thro' the City to Fiſhmonger's Hall, where a grand Entertainment was provided: There were three pair of Kettle-Drums, ſix Trumpers, and eight French Horns, properly diſpos'd in the Proceſſion.

April 30. Extract of a Letter from Warſaw, April 22.

'We have a Confirmation of the March of the Ruſſian Army in three Columns towards Oczakow, under the Command of the Veldt-Marſhal Count Munich, in order to lay Siege to that Place; and our laſt Letters from the Frontiers alſo aſſure us, that the Turks were likewiſe in full March towards Oczakow, for the Preſervation of it; ſo that we every Day expect to hear that the Campaign in thoſe Parts has been open'd with a Battle.

London, May 4 They write from Madrid, that Mr. Keene, the Britiſh Miniſter, having informed the Court of his Majeſty's Order to the Engliſh Fleet to return home: The Catholick King anſwer'd, 'That he was the more pleaſed to 'hear it, becauſe now he ſhould be in a Situation to adjuſt 'in an amicable manner all Differences ſubſiſting between 'him and the Crown of Great Britain.

They write from Lisbon that the Miniſters of State, and the Lords of the Church being aſſembled in the King's Apartment, his Majeſty told them quickly, 'I now inform 'you that the Difference I had with the King of Spain is 'adjuſted, and our Reconciliation compleated.' It is ſaid the Charge of the Engliſh Fleet has been a Million of Cruſadoes to the King, which is nothing in compariſon to the Benefit he has received from it; and which his Portugueſe Majeſty is ſo ſenſible of, that when Admiral Norris had his Audience of Leave, he deſired him to aſſure his Britannick Majeſty, 'That he ſhould never forget the 'Friendſhip his Majeſty had teſtified in the late Criſis of 'Affairs.

Extract of a Letter from Madrid, dated April 9.

M. Vandermeer the Dutch Ambaſſador, had ſome Days ago a long Conference with Don de la Quadra, the Secretary of State, in which he gave him an Account of the Spaniſh Man of War and the Captain who took the Dutch Ship the America; and alſo ſpecified the Place where ſhe was taken in the Weſt-India Seas: To which de la Quadra has ſince declared to the Ambaſſador, that they had examined in the Council for the Weſt-Indies, the Liſt of all the Ships employed for the Guard of the Coaſts of America, and the Names of the Captains that commanded them, but they could find no ſuch Ship or ſuch Captain as was pretended to have taken the America: That however his Majeſty would cauſe a ſtrict Enquiry to be made, and if the Ship could be diſcover'd, he would give the States General all the Satisfaction that could be deſired.

The Negotiations between the Courts of Rome and Madrid meets with freſh Difficulties daily, his Holineſs reſolves not to accept the Conditions offer'd him by the Abbot Garliani, as injurious to the Dignity of the Roman-See.

The Maſters of ſome French Tartanes having reported at Marſeilles, and other Places on the Coaſts of Provence and Languedoc, that a contagious Diſtemper was raging in the Principality of Catalonia, the Magiſtrates at Marſeilles gave immediate Orders, that all Veſſels that came from Spain ſhould perform Quarantine, and paſs through all the Formalities practiſed in Caſes of a Plague. The Commander at Perpignan having been informed of the Meaſures that had been taken at Marſeilles, thought proper on his part to form a line, by which he cut off all Sorts of Communication with Spain by Land, as Marſeilles had done by Sea.

From Ratisbon we learn, that the Evangelick Body had reſolv'd to ſend to the Emperor another Letter, to intreat his Imperial Majeſty to grant the Proteſtants of the Empire a Redreſs of their religious Grievances.

Count Furtemberg, Commander of Fort Kehl paſſed thro' that City in his Way to Vienna, to give the Emperor an Account of the Condition of that Fort, and the Damage it is like to ſuſtain by the Works which the French are building on the Banks of the Rhine.

It is ſaid Don de la Quadra the Secretary of State, has communicated to ſome Foreign Miniſters, certain Letters, in which the Court is informed, That notwithſtanding the King's Orders to the contrary, there are 22 Ships of different Nations, that publickly carry on a contraband Trade upon the Coaſt of New Spain; that for ſome time his Majeſty took no notice of this Advice, but that ſince its being fully confirmed and proved, he could not but think he had great Reaſon to complain of this clandeſtine Commerce. It is added, that ſeveral Perſons who are concerned in the Trade and Navigation of the Spaniſh Weſt-Indies, are greatly alarmed at the News; that two Powers are ſending Ships of War into thoſe Seas, eſpecially to the Heighth of Coracoa.

There are continual Conferences among the Cardinals, in order to digeſt, if poſſible, the hard Conditions from Madrid and Naples, and yet preſerve the Honour of the Roman-See inviolable.

By Letters at Paris from Genoa, of the 24th of laſt Month, they are informed, that the Affairs of Corſica were ſtill in the ſame State, and that the Malecontents had made Incurſions even to the Gates of Baſtia; that they often received Proviſions and Munitions of War, without its being diſcovered from whence they were ſent. The Genoeſe have reſolved to ſend, the firſt fair Wind, their Galleys, in order to hinder any Succours from landing; and a parcel of Troops and Proviſions to victual the Places that the Republick ſtill poſſeſs in the Iſland of Corſica, becauſe of the Rebels endeavouring to hinder any Entrance into thoſe Places.

The Army with which the Czarina propoſes to act offenſively againſt the Turks, is computed at 220,000, including the Coſſacks, and thoſe Tartars that are her Tributaries.

The Drought notwithſtanding all Prayers and Proceſſions, continues in Spain; and in many Parts of Great Poland there's a Famine.

From Naples they write, that the frequent Murders in that City theſe three or four Months paſt having oblig'd his Sicilian Majeſty to ſign ſeveral Warrants for the executing the Murderers, after Sentence of Death had paſs'd upon them, he lately refus'd to ſign one that was preſented to him. What, ſays he, muſt I always ſign Sentences of Death, I that would willingly ſign nothing but Pardons? And can I not make my Subjects better but by deſtroying them? That Prince has given ſuch re-iterated Marks of his Clemency and Tenderneſs to his People, that the ſeveral Courts of Juſtice have been oblig'd to make Remonſtrances to him upon that Head, and to repreſent to him that his Mercy would only give Room to the Commiſſion of greater Crimes and more frequent Diſorders.

London,

London, May 5. Letters from France ſay, that according to their Advices from Spain, the Spaniards uſe the utmoſt Diligence to recruit their Regiments, and put their Fleet into the beſt Condition they can, as if ſome Enterprize was to be put in Execution immediately.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.

Extract of a Letter from Salem, dated July 7.

'On Sunday the 3d of this Inſtant July, about 2 a Clock 'in the Morning, one John Thompſon, an aged Man, who lived 'in this Town of Salem in New-Jerſey, who was very Poor, 'but very ſubject to drink Rum; had been drinking Rum 'the fore-part of the Night till he was Drunk, or very near 'it; and being got in a Paſſion with his Wife told her, he 'would pack up his All, and go to Carolina; and thereupon he 'took a Bundle of things in a Waller, or Bag, and went to 'the Wharffe at the lower end of the Town, and by Endea-'vouring to get into a Cannoe, (a Veſſel he had choſen to 'make his Voyage in,) accidentally ſlipt off the Wharffe 'into the Water, and was drowned.

'He had a Son drowned near the ſame place, about two 'Years ago, in the like condition of being drunk with Rum.

'This, and the like, often prove the Conſequences of 'exceſſive Drinking, which, tho' however frequent ſuch 'things come to paſs, yet nevertheleſs People will not be 'deterred from the immoderate Uſe of ſtrong Liquors: 'This certainly beſpeaks want of due Conduct in the Uſe 'of Things, a Defect too frequent amongſt Mankind, 'which is, I think, a perfect Blot in that Eſcutcheon of 'Reaſon annexed to the Fabrick of human Bodies.

We hear from Hattonfield, over the River, that on Sunday laſt, during the Violent Guſt, (which we had alſo here) one Clemens being in his Barn making up a Mow of Corn, was ſtruck down by the Lightning; and on recovering he perceiv'd the Corn and Barn to be in Flames, out of which he made his Eſcape; but the Barn was burnt down to the Ground with every thing in it, (notwithſtanding the great Fall of Rain,) to the Damage of 100 l.
